

MacDONALD DUE AT WASHINGTON FOR CONFERENCE

To Be Confronted With "New Deal" Different Than Anticipated

CARDS ARE RESHUFFLED

Premier Deprived of Chief
Bargaining
Point

(By International News Service)
WASHINGTON, D. C., Apr. 21.—J. Ramsay MacDonald, British Prime Minister, will set foot in Washington late today to be confronted with a "new deal" radically different from what he anticipated when he sailed from Southampton a week ago.

America's abandonment of the gold standard, leaving the dollar to find its own level among the churning currencies of the world, has had the effect of reshuffling the diplomatic cards to be played in a series of epochal conferences that begin at the White House tonight.

Opinion is virtually unanimous in diplomatic quarters that MacDonald has been deprived of his chief bargaining point by America's abandonment of the gold standard.

For almost two years the British government has "managed" its depreciated pound sterling to the detriment of American commerce in world markets, at the same time complaining that the dearness of the dollar made payment of the British debt to the United States impossible under existing circumstances. This was the strength of the British hand to force concession from America in return for Britain re-embracing the gold standard.

Macon In Initial Test Flight; Off At Sunrise

By Cliff L. Turner
(H. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
ZEPPELIN DOCK, AKRON, Ohio, April 21.—(INS)—Less than three weeks after its sister ship, the Akron, crashed into the turbulent Atlantic, the Navy dirigible U. S. S. Macon took off from Akron Airport at 6 a. m., today, on its initial test flight.

Exactly at sunrise the world's largest airship cast off its moorings and made a perfect take-off with Commander Alger H. Dresel, of New York City, giving the command "Up Ship." A strong wind was blowing from the East. As soon as the great airship had been towed out 1,200 feet north of the north dock door by its 115 ton portable mooring mast, the ground crew of 258 men swung the tail westward to put the gargantuan aircraft in line with the prevailing wind.

KIDNAPPED SON RETURNED

Chicago, Apr. 21.—With his kidnapped son, Jerome, returned home safe, John, "Jake-the-Barber," Factor, millionaire stock promoter, demanded vengeance today with the promise he will "see this thing through to the finish." Although vowing that he had not paid a cent of the $100,000 demanded by the kidnapping gang, Factor vehemently stated: "I will bring my son's abductors to justice."

The 19 year old Northwestern University student was returned to the home of his mother, Mrs. Leonard Marcus, at 230 a. m. today visibly nervous from the 9-day ordeal of captivity, but apparently unharmed.

Surrender of the boy and the collapse of their plot to wrest a huge fortune in ransom from Factor, millionaire gambler in high finance, was looked upon as a victory for the strange alliance between police and the underworld who had been in charge of the search. Factor enlisted the aid of leading members of the Capone syndicate in the hunt. "I shall bring that gang to justice if it is the last thing I do," said the father, dapper but weary-eyed from the almost sleepless vigil of more than a week.

Factor greeted his son early today and heard Jerome's story of being abducted from in front of his mother's apartment house by four men. Although he was guarded closely the youth said he was treated with consideration.

The workers presented a petition requesting a return of the 15 per cent cut made last June.

DOYLESTOWN COUNCIL CONSIDERS RATE SLASH

Disposition of The Matter,
However, Left Until Next Week

$5,000 IN TAXES UNPAID

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 21.—Borough Council has decided to live within its income during the next year and some of the councilmen are willing to slash the tax rate.

This was made known following a lengthy session at which the tax rate for the year was discussed.

G. Thawley Hayman and Frank D. Good, ready to slash the borough expenditures until it hurts, were in favor of reducing the present millage—which is twelve—to ten, and live within the income. Statistics furnished by Councilman Wilmer W. Cornell estimated the tax receipts at ten mills would amount to $74,025, which does not include water and sewer rents. However, President A. Harry Clayton, who stated there will be an adjourned meeting next Monday, urged each department to have a budget of its own ready to submit for next week's meeting and subject to the cut. Final action will be taken next week.

"There is no one who would rather see the millage cut than I, but I feel we should not rush into the scheme before we know just what we are getting into," said President Clayton.

According to Councilman Cornell, about $5,000 borough taxes, and $5000 delinquent water rents remain to be paid before May 1st.

Submitting a tentative budget, Councilman Wilmer W. Cornell itemized the following proposed expenditures and departments: Fire department, $3000; street lighting, $8000; health, $400; police, $6000; ambulance, $300; garbage collection, $840; library, $600; notes, $10,500; interest on bonds, $7900; interest on notes, $600; borough property, $500; printing, $200; water, $11,000; miscellaneous, $4000; sewer, $3500; street labor, $5700; street repairs, $8000; total, $72,550, including a bond of $5000, $77,550. The assessed valuation is $4,352,500.

Mr. Cornell also added that about $1664 is still outstanding for sewer rent.

Chairman Cornell, of the finance and accounts committee, submitted the following report for April: Balance on hand, $984; delinquent borough tax, $289.69; delinquent water tax, $49.62; water rent for April, $3962.98; total receipts for the month amounted to $6332.62, while bills paid were $2468.70.

Notes in bank were $13,500, and bonds amounted to $149,000. A balance of $2080.73 remains on hand, it was reported.

Submitting the police and fire report, issued by Chief of Police J. P. Welsh, Bartram H. Moore stated 11 warnings were issued, 16 arrests made, one completed, two discharged with reprimand, one held for court and 12 pending. $50 was collected in fines for the borough.

Communication from two leading women's civic clubs—the Doylestown Nature Club and the Village Improvement Association—and a petition bearing the signatures of a score or more of prominent citizens, expressing disapproval at the removal of shade trees in order to widen North Main street, was read.

Borough Council, it was stated, will do all in its power to preserve the shade trees which line the street, but President Clayton maintained that Council will not deliberately refuse the removal of a tree which will impede the progress and completion of the new street.

Motion was made that Borough Council donate the sum of $100 to the Doylestown Recreation field for the preparation of the baseball diamond and other needed improvements. The Philip Sichkar, of near Doylestown, suffering two wounds of the chest inflicted by his daughter, was removed from the Doylestown Emergency Hospital to Grand View Hospital, Sellersville.

Sichkar's condition is said to be serious and it is expected that he will undergo an operation some time today for the removal of a bullet which is lodged in a lung.

The man was shot by his daughter, Anna, eighteen, Monday evening following a family quarrel. He is said to have been under the influence of liquor at the time. The girl admits shooting her father, but says she did it to save her mother and brother. The father, mother and daughter are said by police to have been indulging in a post-Easter celebration at a neighbor's home during the afternoon.

The girl is being held in bail.

Organization of the "Sons of Legion," a society for the sons of members of the American Legion in good standing and sons of those killed in service will be completed in Morrisville soon. Charter members will be enrolled and it is expected that a membership of nearly 50 will be listed just as soon as all the details are received from national headquarters.

The Morrisville Post will begin the enrollment at once, and it is expected these juniors will occupy a place in the Memorial Day parade on May 30. The organization will be something on the order of the Sons of Union Veterans although the rules and regulations and other details will be along the lines of the American Legion as outlined by the national body. The idea of such an organization for the sons of members of the Legion originated at the national convention and is spreading throughout the nation. Posts in various parts of the country are taking up the matter, and it is expected the organization of these juniors will be effected in many places.

A committee composed of Albert Bond, chairman; Harry Wilcox and James Murray was named to carry out the project.

Plans for reorganization next month and other future activities were laid at the meeting of the Perkassie Woman's Club, in Fraternity Temple, Perkassie.

CONFERENCE IS HELD TO AVOID TESTIMONY

Parties at Interest in Bristol
Township Taxpayers
Appeal Confer

IN LAW LIBRARY

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 21.—Parties at interest in the appeal of Bristol Township taxpayers from the report of auditors of that township filed in Quarter Sessions Court December 18, 1931, as from the account of supervisors of Bristol township and a former treasurer of the district were trying to reach a statement of facts this morning, so the case can be presented to court for decision without the taking of testimony.

Parties at interest were in conference in the law library.

The case was scheduled for hearing before Judge Calvin S. Boyer, today.

The original appeal was made by John Morrell, Jr., Bristol Township taxpayer, the appeal being for the year beginning December 2, 1930. Howard I. James represents T. Russell Stackhouse, Jasper Lorrimer and Samuel Patterson, supervisors; and former treasurer, Horace Fleckenstein, who are known as the appellees in the case.

On February 6, 1933, an opinion was handed down by Judge Boyer, in which a motion to quash the appeal was dismissed. On March 21st, 1932, records show that Judge Boyer granted a rule on the supervisors and former treasurer, to show cause why their accounts as treasurer and supervisors should not be performed, and to show cause why they should not be surcharged.

The original petition of Mr. Morrell, when filed, declared the report of the auditors erroneous, stating there was a difference of $58,508 in real estate and personal property untaxed in Bristol Township, making a difference in tax revenue of the township of $585.

It was also claimed the supervisors erred in payment of commissions to the former treasurer, Dr. Fleckenstein, as tax collector, then again as treasurer of the township.

A $500 payment to T. Russell Stackhouse for hauling and truck hire is another matter under dispute. Another item in dispute is $211.70 listed in the audit as "expenditures—miscellaneous," without designating the purposes.

Nearly 100 people from the lower section of Bucks County gathered in court for the case.

MORRISVILLE WOMAN TO HAVE HEARING HERE

Mrs. Anna E. Bond Charged
With Fraudulent
Conversion

ARRESTED LAST NIGHT

MORRISVILLE, Apr. 21.—A warrant was served last night upon Mrs. Anna E. M. Bond, widow of the late Lewis R. Bond, who was borough solicitor. The warrant charges Mrs. Bond with fraudulent conversion of funds. Service was accepted by her counsel, Edgar T. Snipes. The warrant was served by Chief of Police Albert Cooper. Mrs. Bond is to appear for a hearing in Bristol on Monday night before Justice of Peace, Edward J. Lynn.

The complainant is Mrs. Julia Gawks, of 31 Phelps avenue, here, who alleges that seven years ago she gave Bond $1,000 to pay off a mortgage on her home. A receipt for the $1,000 was signed by Mrs. Bond and is in Mrs. Gawks' possession, according to the complainant. The latter was surprised recently when the Doylestown Trust Company, of Doylestown, sent her notice that she owes a year's interest on the $1,000 mortgage.

Mrs. Gawks secured counsel and investigation allegedly disclosed that Bond never cancelled the mortgage with the $1,000 paid him by Mrs. Gawks and that Bond allegedly concealed the fraud by meeting the interest payments on the mortgage. Last week Mrs. Gawks' counsel, I. Lewis Rubin, of Bristol, notified Mrs. Bond that unless she made settlement for the $1,000 receipt criminal action would be instituted.

NOW UP TO JUDGES TO DECIDE ABOUT FARM SHERIFF SALE

Both Sides Complete Case At Third Hearing
Yesterday

FOUR HUNDRED ATTEND

Hearing Marked by Clashes
Between Judges, Lawyers and Witnesses

DOYLESTOWN, April 21.—The decision to be made in reference to Bucks county's Sheriff sale case will be handed down by the Judges of Bucks county in the near future.

The case progressed at the third hearing yesterday in the Court House at Doylestown to the extent that all testimony was completed on both sides and it is now up to Judge Hiram H. Keller and Judge Calvin S. Boyer to decide whether the sale should be set aside or whether it will stand. Lawyers on both sides completed their arguments to the Court and Judge Keller directed them to submit briefs, after which an opinion will be handed down.

The 490 farmers who attended yesterday's hearing, some of them members of the Bucks County Farmers' Protective Association, have been interested in the outcome of the case which has attracted nation-wide attention.

Previous hearings brought forth testimony of witnesses for the side of Sheriff Horace E. Gwiner, who filed a petition to have the sale of personal property of John Hanzel, Bodminster township, set aside on the grounds the sale was not conducted properly and that the goods worth between $700 and $800 sold for $1.18 and were bought in at a forced sale by a bidding committee of three members of the farm organization.

Previous witness testified that Attorney Webster S. Achey, who represented Jacob Lauffersweiler, plaintiff in the writ, had been threatened at the sale, and that somebody yelled out at the sale, referring to Achey, "Get a rope and hang the ————."

The goods bought at the sale on January 6 were turned back to Hanzel for $1.00 on a 99-year lease. Twenty-four witnesses were heard on each side of the case during the three different hearings. Farmer witnesses, members of the Bucks County Farmers' Protective Association, yesterday denied that any violence took place at the sale, but admitted they were there out of sympathy for Hanzel and his children. Some of them declared the only violence they saw was when Deputy Sheriff Harry Ross slapped one of the sale attendants across the face when the crowd started to push.

In summing up the case, lawyers on both sides miffed no words. David Levinson, of Philadelphia, representing the organized farm group, argued that Sheriff Gwiner in this case went far beyond his right in saying the sale was irregular. He declared that nowhere on record did it appear that a person at interest, the plaintiff in the writ, entered a complaint in this case. He also argued that the case should be determined by a jury and not by the judges.

Attorney Achey declared the Court erred in the start by not standing by the Sheriff of the county and set the sale aside immediately.

"The big shots of this organization," Mr. Achey continued, "led these poor, deluded and ignorant people into believing many things that were not true, among them being that I was buying the farm goods to put in my own office. This Court has the right to decide this case and it is not for a jury to decide."

Then Attorney Levinson jumped to his feet at the completion of Mr. Achey's remarks.

"I will call your attention that it was the same poor, deluded and ignorant people who some years ago helped pay Mr. Achey a salary as Assistant United States District Attorney in Philadelphia when he was appointed to that office by the late President Wilson, and I am of the opinion that Mr. Achey should apologize for making that remark."

"That is not very gentlemanly," Mr. Achey said to the farm group organization.

"Do you think that you acted like a gentleman?" Mr. Levinson said.

A photostatic copy of a telegram from Governor Pinchot was then produced by Mr. Levinson, who started to read it when Judge Keller stopped him and inquired about the contents. The Court was informed that Governor Pinchot had made certain comment.

"The Court does not care what the Governor of Pennsylvania says concerning this case, we do not always agree with him," Judge Keller said. The same view was expressed by the Court in reference to any other proclamations.

"We do not yield our sympathy to you Mr. Levinson or any other group or organization that sympathizes with the unfortunate," Judge Keller continued. "We are very sorry for every person who has misfortune, but this case will be decided by the laws of Pennsylvania."

Judge Boyer then added: "Our sympathies may be with you but we cannot set aside the law out of sympathy." Continued on Page Four

STANDARDS OF VALUE

There are three measurements that have greatest influence upon the affairs of human life: Measurements of time, of mass and extension, and of value. Two of these are safeguarded by scientific accuracy and guaranties of law and government. One may indulge in a flight of fancy to conjecture what would happen if time were not standardized and everybody and everything operated on its own time. Trains could not make connections, ships would lose their reckoning, appointments would be useless and chaos would reign in all business and industry. Society is organized on a standard of time.

Suppose the standards of measure and of weight were subject to periodic change without notice instead of being guarded with infinite care by science and government. Deeds would be worthless, a ton of coal might be the equivalent of two tons today and a half-ton tomorrow, commerce could no longer be conducted on a basis of pounds, tons, quarts and bushels. The standards of weight and measure must be kept absolutely unvarying.

Science and society have ordered unflinching standards of time, weight and measure but the standard of values is left to run at loose ends and to be as unreliable as a worn-out clock. This is called an age of organization and order, yet the possessor of a fortune today may see it dwindle to a pittance tomorrow. Land worth millions today can be made temporarily worthless almost overnight. There is a money standard but it doesn't prevent the dollar from buying twice as much today as it did in 1929.

There is nothing impractical or visionary in dreaming of an unchanging standard of value. Nothing would bring to society greater assurance of progress, safety and stability.

WELL DRESSED

Perhaps the man in the audience has misjudged the "best-dressed man on the screen." He may have felt that the actors for whom publicity agents made such claims were more or less foppish or dandified, but in the light of seven rules of good dressing laid down by one of them that opinion will have to be revised. Neatness and proper care are more important than newness. Run-over heels are taboo. So are dirty and misshapen hats. Creases on coat sleeves, knickers and golf clothes are deprecated. Suspenders are essential to properly draped trousers. Dirty fingernails are forgiven only on men engaged in manual labor. Only in his bedroom may a man appear unshaven.

And what price good dressing? This movie star says he can prove that a man making $40 a week can dress as well as a millionaire, maintaining that good taste and good dress are not necessarily the accompaniment of riches.

Clothes make the man, but do not accurately proclaim his credit rating. Many a millionaire has gone shabby and many a pauper is immaculate. Good dressing is a matter more of time and attention than money, and yet men upon whose hands time weighs heavy are most guilty of neglect of their personal appearance. Unemployment and poverty breed carelessness.

Eyed by Uncle Sam

A pillar of the Democratic Party and a Chicago ward committeeman Moe Rosenberg (above) has come under the searching eye of Uncle Sam. Action was recently started by U. S. District Attorney Dwight F. Green to examine Rosenberg's 1931-1932 income tax return. Startling revelations were promised.

Inflation Apostle

Senator Elmer Thomas of Oklahoma, who drafted the three-point inflation bill under which President Roosevelt would become dictator over the nation's monetary policy with power to adopt inflationary laws. In view of the U. S. abandonment of the gold standard, the bill has aroused keen interest, for it impowers the President to accept payment of war debts in silver and to reduce the gold content of the dollar.

"MARY FAITH"

by Beatrice Burton

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

Mary Faith, comely young orphan, gives up her position as secretary to the wealthy Mark Nesbit to marry Kimberley Farrell. Kim, a young, shiftless lawyer, lives with his mother. When the latter objects to the marriage, Kim brusquely startles Mary Faith by breaking the engagement. Later, when he sees her with Mark Nesbit in a jewelry store, selecting a ring, his jealousy is aroused. The next morning, he appears at Mary Faith's boarding house and overwhelms her with his protestations of love. She again leaves her position and, after a hasty marriage, they spend an ecstatic two weeks' honeymoon in the house of Kim's aunt in the country. Returning home, Mary Faith moves to the Farrell apartment. Kim's friends, Claire and Jack Maldon, find Mary Faith a dull companion for their jazzy parties. Mary Faith realizes Kim is irritated by her failure to drink and gamble. During the winter Kim attends the parties alone. Mary Faith takes care of the house but knows nothing of Kim's finances. When he hints at being pinched for money, Mary Faith accedes to his request for $60. Later, he admits taking that sum from the firm's collections for his own use. The next night, at dinner, he tells Mary Faith he has lost his position. He then persuades her to let him have a thousand dollars to open his own office.

CHAPTER XXI

They didn't let his mother know that he had lost his position with McIntire and Westover.

"There's no reason why we should," Mary Faith decided. "It will only make her miserable. Kim, we'll simply tell her that you've made up your mind to set up shop for yourself."

And that was what they told her. "I suppose that was your brilliant idea," she said to Mary Faith the next morning after Kim had left the house to hunt for an office. "But I think he'd have been much better off if he'd stayed right where he was, making sixty dollars a week and having no responsibility at all! Suppose he fails—what then?"

"He won't fail. Don't you worry about his failing," Mary Faith said lightly. She was very happy that morning.

She was glad to have Kim away from the offices of McIntire and Westover. Perhaps he wouldn't see so much of Jack Maldon and his crowd of card-playing friends now that he was no longer working with them.

"And that Janet-girl—" she went on thinking, as she rinsed the pink-sprigged china dishes and began to wipe them. "She won't be under his nose all day long any more, either." She never had asked Kim about the girl named Janet, but she had always had a feeling that she was still working for McIntire and Westover.

On Friday Kim drove her downtown to the Towers Building and showed her the office he had rented. The Towers Building was old and its elevator made Mary Faith think of a bird cage. A very old and rusty one.

"It's not much of a building," Kim said apologetically, "but I won't have to stay here forever."

His office was on the eighth floor. It was small and its one and only window looked out into the well of the building.

"I got it for ninety snackers a month," he announced proudly, "and I signed a lease for six months. By the end of that time I'll be able to afford a better place—what do you bet I won't?"

"I know you will," Mary Faith told him. "You're hard stuff, Kim, and you're sure to win out. The germ of failure just isn't in you! She meant it with all her heart. Her confidence in him was boundless.

He showed her where his desk would stand and where his office girl's desk would stand. He took a ruler out of his coat pocket and measured the wall where he would put his filing cabinet and his bookcases.

When he had finished Mary Faith put out her hand for the ruler. "I'll measure the window and make you a pair of net sash curtains for it, Kim. And, Kim, let me tell you about a place where you can pick up a rug and whatever furniture for almost nothing. It's a second-hand store that deals in office furniture. I know about it because Mr. Nesbit sold some of our old desks there last year—"

"Don't talk to me about him," Kim said sharply. He was still jealous of Mark Nesbit. "He and his office furniture don't interest me a little bit."

The office was all ready to be occupied on the last of April. On the first day of May, which was a Saturday, Kim took Mary Faith down to see it and she put up the cream-colored net curtains that she had made and presented him with a leather desk set that she had bought for a surprise.

"Did you hire an office girl?" she asked suddenly on their way home. Kim nodded.

"What's her name?"

"Miss McCune."

The month of May was a month of beauty even in Wilton Street with its red brick apartment buildings and its narrow sidewalks. The sun shone and the grass grew greener day after day. The brown grass under Mary Faith's kitchen windows began to turn a fresh young green, and every morning and evening a robin came there and sang as if its little throat would burst. To Mary Faith, hanging up clothes or shaking rugs on the porch, the tiny square of backyard seemed to hold the very heart of the springtime.

And at the very end of that month of beauty and promise, Mary Faith became aware that she was going to have a baby.

Late one Monday afternoon—afterward she always remembered that it was the twenty-eighth of May—she put on the dark green suit in which she had been married and went downtown to the Medical Building where Dr. Thatcher had his office.

It was five o'clock when she left him and came out into the sunlight of Spring Street once more—sunlight that seemed brighter and lovelier than any sunlight she had ever known.

She felt as if she were walking in an enchantment as she started west on Spring Street toward the Towers Building. She was going to break Kim's rule, for just this one time, and go up to his office to tell him about the wonderful, the divine thing that was going to happen to the two of them.

His office was at one end of the winding corridor on the eighth floor of the old building. As she walked toward it she felt her heart swell with love and pride at the sight of his name on the door. It had a fine important look, painted there on the frosted glass in neat black letters: KIMBERLEY FARRELL.

Attorney-at-Law.

She pushed open the door and went in. Kim was sitting at his desk, his head and shoulders dark against the light of the window behind him. And on the desk, with her feet braced against his chair and both of her hands clasped in his hands, sat a girl.

She jumped down when she saw Mary Faith and made a little inarticulate sound in her throat. She was a dark, pretty girl, plump and not very tall. Everything about her gave the impression of softness and roundness—her little figure in a black dress, her cheeks and chin, her small full mouth.

All this Mary Faith saw in the one second before her eyes met Kim's eyes.

"Hello, there," she staidly, her lips to get the words out. There was a chair beside his desk and she sank down into it. "I had to come downtown this afternoon and I thought I'd ride home with you." She saw his lips move and she knew that he was answering her. But she couldn't hear what he was saying. There was a sudden loud ringing in her ears like the sound of many bells close at hand.

Then she saw the girl move across the room and take down her hat and jacket from the coat-tree in the corner. All her movements seemed very slow, like action in a nightmare. . . .

There was something bright on one of her fingers. It flashed as she raised her hands to her head and pulled her hat down over her hair. . . . Mary Faith leaned forward, her wide eyes fixed on it, her hands gripping the arms of her chair until the knuckles whitened.

It was a ring. A narrow white-gold ring set with a modest diamond and two chips.

The last time Mary Faith had seen it was the rainy September morning in Halmorth Park when Kim had asked her for it and she had given it to him. It was the ring that she had worn on her own hand every day for almost four years. Her engagement ring. . . .

She heard Kim's voice, faint and thin as if it came to her from a long distance. He was speaking to the girl, "Don't forget to drop those letters in the chute on your way out, Janet."

And then, after what seemed a very long time, the girl said, "Good night, Mr. Farrell." There came the click of the door as it closed behind her and the sound of her high heels dying away down the corridor.

Kim began to clear off his desk, putting papers and envelopes into the top drawer. He slammed it, tried to see if it was locked, opened it and slammed it again. He swung around in his swivel chair and picked his gray hat up from the filing cabinet against the wall.

"All right, let's go," he said.

She made a little negative movement with her head.

"No. Wait a just a minute. I want to ask you something, Kim. Who is that girl?" His mouth tightened and he threw his hat down upon the desk. "Oh, you know who she is just as well as I do! You saw her with me that night in Armbruster's? Why pretend that you didn't? What are you trying to do? Trap me in some kind of a lie."

Mary Faith shook her head.

"You're wondering what she's doing here, aren't you? Well, I'll tell you!" Kim said roughly. "She was so doggone loyal to me that when I left McIntire and Westover she left too. So what could I do but give her a job when I opened this office?"

Mary Faith gave him a deep still look.

"That's why you didn't want me to come down here—because she was here," she said, thinking things out. "You didn't want me to see her. But I didn't even know her, Kim. I didn't look at her that night when she was in Armbruster's with you. And I wouldn't have known who she was just now if she hadn't been wearing my—ring."

REVENGE ON MEN

God put men on the earth To live, to prosper and to die; But He did not put men there To see how high they could fly. God has had his revenge today. Penalty has been paid By men who took no part in it. While the Akron plunged beneath the waves.

The Akron, like the Shenandoah, Was doomed to crash in a storm; Somewhere in the ocean deep Are men who are dead— They are now in a deep, deep, Sleep. Men try to be mightier than God, But He will not let it be; That is why He plunged the Akron In that raging, boiling sea.

Somewhere on the Atlantic coast Are fragments of that ship That once sailed the blue skies, Not thinking that she could slip. It was in that rainy night of April, In the year of "Thirty-Three," That God put his hand down, And plunged the Akron Into the raging, boiling sea.

Someday men will realize That too much power Is weaker than none.

Now Up To Judges To Decide About Sheriff Sale

Mr. Levinson then informed the Court that it was his belief, as had been recently spoken at a gathering of lawyers in Philadelphia, that it is the right and duty of lawyers to assist the Courts to interpret the law in the light of changing conditions that we have today.

"The farmer is a terrific victim of an existing emergency," Mr. Levinson added.

The last speaker was Attorney Vanarsdalen, speaking for the Sheriff's office. He said that it would be a travesty of justice to allow this sale to stand.

"It would make a burlesque and farce out of the law, such as has been made by certain witnesses for the farm organization in this case, some of whom poked fun and ridiculed the American system of government.

"I have plenty of sympathy for the unfortunate, but I have no sympathy whatsoever with the agitators, those who oppose our system of American government and such people as those who advocate the release of such characters as Mooney."

Steven Truscott, Lahaska farmer, who was one of the ten witnesses called by the farm organization, yesterday, said on the witness stand:

"If the people thought the way I do there would be no Sheriff's sales. I think Sheriff's sales are legalized highway robbery. There is nothing right about them. I believe in law and order, but as an Englishman, I will fight against an unjust law."

"Where would all of you be if it were not for the farmers? And since I have come up to this section of the country from Philadelphia, I think less of the Courts than ever before."

"Are you an American citizen?" Judge Keller asked Truscott.

"Yes, I am, I was not naturalized, but my father was," Truscott answered.

State Police in plain clothes were stationed at various places in the big court room, but there was no disorder other than the fact that tipstaves had to stop spectators from laughing at times.

Leo Arss, Thicum; Mrs. Verna Reese, Montgomery county; Mrs. Stephani Kodas, Peter Kodas, Hilltown township; Bruno Bobiak, Richlandtown; Harper Atkinson, Buckingham township; Charles Truscott, Lahaska, were other farmers' witnesses yesterday.

Wilson Kling, of Warrington, pleaded guilty to operating an automobile without the owner's consent. Judge Boyer suspended sentence on condition that Kling pay the costs of prosecution, and then released Kling on probation for a period of one year.

Stephen Smigelski, of Lamberville, who was convicted last February of operating an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor and was refused a new trial, was sentenced by Judge Boyer to pay a fine of $200 and costs. Prison sentence was suspended and Smigelski placed on probation for two years.

Frederick Tarantino, of Richland township, pleaded guilty to a charge of operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor on the Bethlehem pike. He was sentenced to pay the costs and serve ten days in the county prison from April 8th, and placed on probation for one year.
